He went on to describe the following four possible scenarios for South Africa * indefinite white rule involving suppression and oppression * black revolution (Cassidy believes this extended civil war, probably leading to authoritarian black rule a reform process with black rule and including white participation.

"I would like to think that the acceptable scenario is the fourth — shared power. The numbers in South Africa suggest black dominance," he said.

Michael Cassidy is often asked what outsiders can do about South Africa. His answer is: "Whatever you do, do it humbly, sincerely and with love."

While the world debates the proposed imposition of sanctions against South Africa, Cassidy makes it clear that he does not favour mandatory sanctions.

"If sanctions were imposed, and if they vere even only 20% effective, about 330,000 blacks and 90,000 whites would be put out of work. If they achieved 50% effectiveness about 1.1 million people would become unemployed" he said.

"Most of these people would have no social security benefits - nothing".

He spoke of a town he had visited recently where 70% of the population were unemployed and without the dole.

"But", he said, "if you in Australia and the sanctions issue, and it comes with love and tears, it will probably be effective."

Cassidy believes that there should be a national convention to hammer out a constitution acceptable to all South Africans

"However, I cannot see real solution: merging without a spiritual awakening. There needs to be a pincer movement of the Spirit of God. It is only by the power of the Holy Spirit that the white population can be brought to a point of repentance."

"In addition, a massive supernatural act of forgiveness from the blacks is needed. The spirit of vengeance, if proceeded with, will plunge South Africa into a serious civil war."

"All power is in Jesus," Mr. Cassidy said "In South Africa we are seeing a revolution. It cannot be stopped. It must be channelled. It must be channelled

NOW. Only by preaching Jesus Christ can "South Africa professes to be 80% Christian. The Christian Church, an untapped source, is the solution," Mr. Cassidy said.

There were few unmoved hearts as the breakfast guests wended their way through the parliamentary corridors and out into the now warmer sunshine.

Michael Cassidy then moved into a well attended Press Conference in St. Andrew's House, Sydney Square.

The questions here were topical and political rather than spiritual. This did not stop Cassidy from pressing his Christian

He told the media representatives that South Africa faced the most difficult situation in the world today, struggling with the collapse of apartheid, but in a state of deadlock as to the structures which should take its place.

"I deplore the whole system of apartheid. But I do not want to see it replaced by something worse. I do not want to see an authoritarian black government. Neither do I want to see the mmunications of South Africa collapse," he said.

Mr. Cassidy said that no lasting answer could be found for South Africa that did not involve the Dutch Reformed Church in some form of change

"A significant religious component of our problem is that the Dutch Reformed Church has theologically legitimised apartheid. The Government has thrived on it. In October the Synod of the Dutch Reformed Church is due to debate whether or not apartheid is heresy. If the Synod decides that it is heretical, the ethical rug will have been pulled from under the Government's feet."

"This is highly significant. Christians should be praying about the outcome,"

A reporter asked Mr. Cassidy whether the National Initiative for Reconciliation, of which he is chairman, was showing too much faith in the government's willingness to reform.

He said: "There is a desire for reform. In fairness, Mr. P. W. Botha, who is a man of some courage, has precipitated more change in five years than we have seen in the last 20 years."

"Whether he knows it or not he has opened a Pandora's Box. It is only a matter of time before the government will have to unban the African National Congress. When that happens, South Africa will have crossed the Rubicon and opened the way to black majority rule."

The last function in a busy first day of attended by about 260 people including the Archbishop of Sydney, his predecessor, Sir Marcus Loane and the President of the Baptist Union, the Reverend Pope. The Chairman of African Enterprise, Dr. Paul White, officiated.

Michael Cassidy told the diners that 7,000 people had been converted at a recent African Enterprise initiated missio in Uganda.

He commended the work of the Commonwealth Eminent Persons Group on South Africa.

"My only sadness is that the EPG gave up so quickly. I wish I could tell Mr Malcolm Fraser and his colleagues that they were close to a break-through."

Returning to the theme dear to his heart, Mr. Cassidy again pointed to the need for reconciliation.

"The church is equipped to fulfil a ministry of reconciliation. Where there is polarisation, we have the mandate given by the Lord Himself. The Church needs to rise in the power of the Holy Spirit to fulfil that task"

"The Church alone has a transcendent hope," he said.

Cassidy told his audience that both blacks and whites must come to the Cross in repentance and for forgiveness. "The Cross is a painful place," he said.

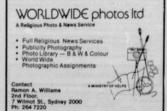

The evening meal was satisfying, the owship was rich, and the message of the Cross and the need for reconciliation rberated through the Town Hall at Lane Cove.

The pace changed next day as Michael Cassidy attended a series of meetings at the University of Sydney, arranged by the Chaplain to the University, the Rev. Robert Forsyth, who is also Rector of St. Barnabas, Broadway. About 350 students turned out to a meeting in the Carslaw Lecture Theatre arranged by the Evangelical Union. Christ was proclaimed and the message was received with warmth and acceptance.

Later Mr. Cassidy met with representatives of Christian groups within the university with whom he spoke of ministry on campus, emphasising the call of God to prayer.

An evening meal was taken at an Italian An evening meal was taken at an Itali restaurant in Newtown at a function arranged by people from St. Barnabas'. About 130 came of whom it was estimated that about one third were people who do not go to church at all.

Robert Forsyth said later that evangelising was going on around the tables. The theme at this dinner was more on the Cross than South Africa as Mr. Cassidy presented a powerful argument for those present to look at Christ. It was the night of the Royal Wedding, but the people still came out in force

Lay Presidency and divorce, again

1986 Sydney Synod — interest mixed with mundane?

The Third Session of the 40th Synod of the Diocese of Sydney will begin in the Chapter House of St. Andrew's Cathedral on Tuesday, October 7. Synodsmen — Cler and lay — will again take their uncomfortable seats to sit out the expected five day session. Many find it absorbing — others tire after the first day. The numbers certainly diminish as each Synod day passes.

Before the session actually commences a service of Evening Prayer will be held in the Cathedral. The Preacher will be the Rev. Canon S. Van Culin, D.D., Secretary General of the Anglican Consultative

Some interesting reports will be presented to Synod members. One covering a contentious topical issue relates to the Status of Human Life. At the last session of the Synod a resolution was passed expressing unqualified opposition to any form of live embryo experimentation not undertaken for the benefit of the embryo concerned and asked the Standing Committee to have a theological statement prepared on the status of human life, with particular reference to its origins, development and termination. The Standing Committee will bring forward its report.

Lav presidency at the Holy Communion has been before the Synod previously and has been the cause of dissension. In 1983 the Synod requested the Standing Committee to set up a committee to explore the desirability and constitutional aspects of lay presidency at the Holy Communion. The report came before the Synod last year and in essence recommended that the Archbishop may authorise any person whom he has authorised to deliver a sermon or sermons to preside at the Lord's Supper in certain circumstances. The Committee's report noted, however, that the committee had discussed its draft report with the Archbishop who indicated that he will not give his assent to an Ordinance which sought to give effect to the proposals contained in the

At last year's Synod the Marriage of Divorced Persons Ordinance lapsed for want of the Archbishop's assent. The matter is still the subject of discussion between the Standing Committee with a view to reaching agreement on what should be done.

Another report of interest will relate to ninistry to minority ethnic groups. The question has been on the mind of the Australian Church Record for some little time and the report may well provide the basis for a future investigative article.

The Diocesan Income and Expenditure Ordinance is always a subject of great interest being, in effect, the Budget of the Diocese. The estimates for 1987 will involve a record expenditure in the vicinity of $6.17 million.

The Ordinances planned for the session do not sound as if they are going to set the world on fire. Briefly, they are

- an Ordinance relating to the amount of leave a minister may take in excess of his normal annual entitlement of four weeks:
- allowing for deacons to be eligible for appointment to the House of Clergy in the General Synod;
- · the use of alternative tables of lessons during church services. Much of the interest of Synod focusses on the motions put forward. These are an unknown factor at this stage. But the first mailing to Synod members has gone out and it is now up to those members to do Revival came to the revivalists July 12-21 at the International Conference for tinerant Evangelists.

More than 8,000 evangelists from 173 ountries and territories devoted 10 days at Amsterdam's cavernous RAI Convention Centre to sharpening their skills and increasing their knowledge to better "do the work of the evangelist" the conference's theme.

Welcomed to Amsterdam 86 by honorary chairman Billy Graham, participants heard 21 plenary addresses, attended five conference-wide seminars and selected seven of the 141 workshops offering ideas for nearly every imaginable aspect of evangelism, from fundraising to open air preaching to working with teenagers in the Middle East.

Mostly, however, they got revived. The spirit of revival was dramatically symbolized in opening ceremonies as six torchbearers representing the earth's continents simultaneously lighted the "flame of the gospel."

It was reverently present in a massive communion service as preachers from various nations, cultures and church traditions joined in prayerful remembrance of Christ's death on the Even elaborate security precautions, including mandatory plastic wristbands and badges for every person and X-ray screening equipment at all RAI entrances, failed to dampen the enthusiasm.

While tight security was evidence that the possibility of some kind of terrorist attack was considered, Graham told reporters at a news conference the thought of cancelling the meeting "never crossed our minds."

Amsterdam 86, an expanded version of a similar meeting held in the same city in 1983, fulfilled a dream for Graham. The 67-year-old American evangelist, who envisioned a "school for evangelists" in contrast to a conference on evangelism, was the guiding force behind the historic

Simeon's Song Luke 2: 29-32

What's the most important thing you hope to achieve before you die?

What would have to happen for you to make you feel ready to die?

- See your family all grown up and happily married?
- Perhaps even see your grandchildren grown up?
- . Go on a world trip?
- * Make enough money to guarantee security for your loved ones?
- * Make a famous name for yourself?

In Luke 2: 29-32 we have a man who tells God in effect that now he is ready to die. (v. 29) The "dismissing" is talking about death, because in v. 26 Luke tells us that it had been revealed to Simeon by the Holy Spirit that he would not die before he had seen the Lord's Christ (Messiah).

So what kind of man is this that he can speak as if the grave has no terror for him?

We know nothing about him apart from this story. His name is Simeon. He was a godly fellow staying in Jerusalem at the time. Picture Bibles usually show him as old but it's not said that he was old; we don't know how old he was. He may have been quite young (like you and !!), yet now he is ready to die.

What's happened to take away from him the natural fears that all many have of death?

He has seen and had a nurse of a month-old baby boy! (v. 28) ("monthold" probably because of Leviticus 12).

Surely there must be more to it than that, you would think. And so there is. His readiness to die comes from the fact that he recognises 3 important things about this baby lesus in his arms. (v. 30.31)

Jesus is God's Salvation (v. 30)

Salvation is something that we all need if we would be right with God. And God has provided it himself in Jesus, who is the only way. There is no other way. (John 14:6)

Simeon realises this about Jesus because the Holy Spirit has led him to this particular child.

The Holy Spirit does the same today—he always leads to Jesus those who, like Simeon, are seeking for God's salvation, because Jesus is the only saviour. (Acts 4:12)

But there is more that Simeon recognises here. Jesus is the prepared or promised Saviour.

God is faithful to His promises (v. 31a)

The birth of this child is not some unexpected event to God or sudden decision by God. It is the direct fulfilment of God's promise. What Simeon is seeing in his arms is that God is faithful to his word. God has done what he promised conturies earlier.

Welfare State has not failed,

People who just make promises don't give us much confidence, but people who make and keep promises are the ones who inspire great confidence. That's what Simeon saw in God. He knew God's covenant promises of a Messiah from way back, and in v. 25 we read that he was looking forward to the "consolation of Israel" i.e. the coming of this Messiah, but now he saw that it had all come true. So God really could be trusted to keep his promises!

Still it is true today that nothing gives us more confidence in the face of death than being sure that God keeps his promises; because if he does, his particular promise of eternal life with him beyond the grave will also be kept.

But there's something even more special about this baby. Something that Simeon knew that others, even his mother and father hadn't yet been told. Something that would remove not only Simeon's fears of death but certainly anyone else's as well.

I am included (v. 31b)

Gabriel had spoken of Jesus as a King like David. (Luke 1:33) Shepherds had been told of him as Saviour and Lord (Luke 2:11) who would bring peace to those on whom God's favour rested (Luke 2:14)

All of these titles and roles would only have been thought of at that stage in relation to the nation of Israel.

Simeon goes an amazing step further. He says this salvation is prepared "in the sight of all people". And by 'sight' he doesn't mean just 'onlookers', but that all people, Jew and Gentile will actually share in this salvation together. (v. 32 "a light for revelation to the Gentiles, and for glory to your people Israel".

No matter who you are you are included. No need to trace your family tree to see if you belong to the national race of God's people Israel, as many cults do.

True freedom

In a world consisting of many manmade ways of salvation, of broken promises, and of exclusive religious groups, you can also be as free as Simeon from the fear of death, and confident of your eternal salvation. This will be possible for you as you live by these 3 basic truths that the Holy Spirit continues to teach us through this song so long ago revealed to Simeon.

- ★ Jesus is God's only way of Salvation
- → God's promises will all be kept

Canberra — Goulburn Anglican synod report

National centre stalled

Proposals for the development of a $10 million national Anglican Centre, near the "parliamentary triangle" in Canberra, could be stalled by failure to gain tax deductibility.

Anglican Bishop of Canberra and Goulburn, the Rt. Revd. Owen Dowling, reported this in an address to diocesan synod in Goulburn on Friday night.

Bishop Dowling said a decision by the church's General Synod, agreeing to an Australia-wide appeal to fund the centre, had been contingent on it being granted tax deductibility.

However, it appeared the present Government did not feel bound by a promised decision of the previous Government

Women Deacons

The Anglican Diocese of Canberra and Goulburn is to have women ordained as deacons.

This follows a decision at the Synod of the diocese on Saturday in which clergy and laity voting separately gave support by a clear majority to a canon enabling the ordination of women as deacons.

Bishop Owen Dowling has indicated that he will now proceed to the ordination of women later in the year.

In moving the motion to assent to ordaining women as deacons, Bishop Bruce Wilson said he believed that the Church would be enriched by having women in the ministry

"And what's going to happen to God? We are going to understand Him in a deeper way, for after all He is not male and He is not female either. God is both male and female and much more too." Bishop Wilson said he did not know the name of any biblical scholar of international standard who would say that the scriptures prohibit the ordination of women as deacons.

Opposition came from the Revd. Joe Mullins, from Pambula, who said he deplored "the lack of theological depth in this debate".

"We are all level at the foot of the cross, but in the Bible there is a headship in the family, resting on the man.

"I do not oppose the ordination of women as deacons, but this issue is loaded because it is expected that women will go on to be priests and bishops."

Careforce

The Diocese of Canberra and Goulburn is moving towards establishing "Anglican Careforce" in its area.

The Synod of the Diocese, meeting in Goulburn over the weekend, endorsed a proposal to establish "Careforce" in the area to assist the social welfare work of the Church.

World Home Bible League Conference

orld Home Bible League national staff and families at Staff Confere

The second Annual Staff Conference of the World Home Bible League was held at "Namaroo" Conference Centre, Lane Cove, N.S.W., from July 22nd to 25th. Representatives from all the Eastern States and New Zealand gathered to discuss and pray about the League's ministry of equipping local Churches throughout Australia and New Zealand for evangelism and Scripture distribution.

During the conference, a farewell dinner was held for Rev. Gerald Hanscamp, founder and former General Secretary of the League in Australia. After long service leave and overseas ministry, Mr. & Mrs. Hanscamp will be leaving for Melbourne, where Gerald will serve as Field Director and State Representative.

It is hoped that the League's ministry in

New Zealand will soon benefit from the appointment of the first full time worker in that country. The work in Australia has continued to expand, with over 400,000 Scriptures and Christian booklets being placed in the past year.

Major Australian Video/Bible series released

"Discovering Paul"

"Discovering Paul", the second twelvepart film series on the New Testament from Wesley Film Productions, has now been released in Australia.

Hosted by the Rev. Dr. Gordon Moyes, Superintendent of Wesley Central Mission in Sydney, "Discovering Paul" is based on the book of the same name written by Gordon Moyes.

This second series follows "Discovering Jesus", Wesley Film Production's Australian twelve-part documentary, released in 1984, that vividly depicts the life and teachings of Jesus Christ, graphically relating those events of nearly 2,000 years ago to today.

"Discovering Paul" was shot entirely on location throughout Italy, Greece, Turkey, Israel, Malta and Cyprus on over one hundred historical biblical sites.

Director, Martin Johnson, and cameraman, Robert Draper, set out to capture the feeling of the great Roman world in which the Apostle Paul ministered. Martin Johnson, who also cowrote the series with Gordon Moyes, spent twelve months re-earching possible filming locations and, together with Robert Draper and Producer, Richard Baker, looked at all the possible sites during the first half of 1985.

The series continues the theme of "Discovering Jesus" taking the viewer from the Gospels to the Acts of the Apostles and the Epistles of St. Paul, looking at the impact made by Paul as he travelled throughout the Roman Empire spreading the Christian faith.

Covering the remainder of the New Testament, is "Discovering The Young Church", the third in the series to be released in 1987.

Christianity under Communism

Keston College analyses the facts

In 1982 religious delegates concerned with securing peace in the modern world travelled from all corners of the globe to Moscow, at the invitation of Patriarch Pimen, to attend a splendidly prepared peace conference organised by the Russian Orthodox Church.

Once in Moscow, any foreign delegate to this conference could if he had cared to do so have paid a visit to the American Embassy where he would have found seven Pentecostal Christians from Siberia spending their fourth year in cramped conditions, still holding out for their right to permission from the Soviet authorities to emigrate from their country where, they claimed, it was impossible for them to witness to their faith in freedom.

Paradoxical impressions: what is the truth? Is it possible for a religious believer to bear effective witness to his faith in a Marxist-Leninist country? The answer, as one might expect, is far from simple: it depends which country you are talking about; which period in recent history; which religious denomination. Those who seek for whatever reason to paint a totally black or white picture with a few simple brushstrokes regularly find themselves having to take account of evidence of the opposite colour, or of some shade in between.

Research team

The research centre devoting itself to the most systematic academic study of the whole question of the encounter between Marxism-Leninism and religious faith in countries with Communist Governments is Keston College. Our team of some two dozen researchers, earch assistants and archive, library and information officers receive, analyse cross-reference and file a huge quantity of written material from both West and East. They supplement this material with personal experience of Eastern Europe and the conditions there in order to produce a steady flow of articles and books. In this way the college steadily builds up information on this important ubject, which has for so long be relatively neglected not only by scholars but by politicians, churchmen and other concerned with relations with Eastern European and other communist

"the aim . . . is to produce wellresearched, objective and accurate information"

Within the boundaries provided by "Marxism-Leninsm" and "religion", Keston College has set itself the widest possible brief. The founder of Keston College, the Rev. Michael Bourdeaux, sees the inspiration to begin this work as his calling as a Christian, but the college does not confine its interest to Christians alone.

Main aim

In the knowledge that the experiences and problems of believers living in Communist countries are of the same order whatever their faith, and in the belief that freedom to practise one's faith is a basic human right, the college publishes material on Muslims, Jews, Buddhists, and other religious groups as well as on Christians of all denominations, and deals with all aspects of the experience of religious communities, from the activities of Church leaders and their official relations with the State to the sufferings of believers imprisoned for their faith.

Although the college has no hesitation in publicising the cases of those who are persecuted for their faith, it does not engage in campaigning or aid activities on behalf of such people. The aim of the college is to produce well-researched, objective and accurate information in the knowledge that others will use it. We believe that everyone who is concerned with Communist countries, from the Christian layman who prays for individual prisoners of conscience to the diplomat on a delegation to Moscow, will do his work more effectively if he has assimilated the kind of material we are systematically providing.

"a revival of religion has come about in spite of ... the efforts of the authorities"

We are glad to note that more and more people are coming to know of our work, to use it regularly, and to have confidence in its accuracy. We are in constant touch with a wide range of individuals and organisations from local prayer groups to the US State Department. We believe that in the long run the only basis for permanent understanding between East and West is mutual respect, and that the only basis for such respect is a readiness by all participants in dialogue to receive and present the truth however complex it may be.

Criticisms

Keston College has of course come in for a good deal of criticism over the years. One criticism frequently made is that the College is simply a human rights organisation concerned solely with those persecuted for their faith. Part of the problem here is that the media are naturally interested primarily in reporting "sensational" cases and urgent stories of human interest. Anyone who regularly reads the full range of our published material, however, will quickly see that we do indeed cover all aspects of the religious situation in the countries we study.

Another related criticism is that we deliberately concentrate on the "bad" news, ignoring evidence of religious revival in Communist countries. Once again, this criticism is based on a poor knowledge of our output. We have never ceased to report with joy on the growth of interest in religion in the countries we study; but we know that it is not enough to report on "revival" and leave the story there.

In some of the countries we study, religious revival has at various times indeed been the consequence of increasing toleration by the authorities; but all too often, and particularly in recent years, a revival of interest in religion has come about in spite of an intensification of the efforts of the authorities to control religious growth and to victimise religious activists. Once again, the picture is highly complex; cause and effect are accurately ascertained only after long scrutiny.

Another criticism is that the work of the college is anti-ecumenical and harms the efforts of those organisations and individuals who would build bridges between communities of religious believers in East and West. Those who make this criticism do so on the basis of regular statements from religious leaders from the USSR and Eastern Europe that there is growing religious freedom in heir countries, that so-called dissidents are lawbreakers unrepresentative of their Churches, that to draw attention to their cases threatens the freedoms enjoyed by the law-abiding religious believers in their countries, and that in general negative comments about religious freedom in Eastern Europe are destructive of detenté and the process of securing international peace.

Once again, the experience of Keston College suggests that the picture is far more complex than this. There are certain churches in Eastern Europe — for example, the Protestant Church in East Germany and the Roman Catholic Church in Poland — which are well able to deal with problems arising in their relations with the Governments of their countries without needing intervention from abroad.

Intervention

Philip Walters
Dr. Philip Walters is Research

Director of Keston College.

But there are many other Churches, the largest being the Russian Orthodox Church, which have a much harder task. There is plenty of evidence to show that whatever the leaders of this Church may say in public, they privately welcome informed and responsible intervention in their internal affairs by concerned outsiders in order that they may have a lever in negotiations with the secular authorities at home.

Over the last decade individuals and organisations of all kinds concerned with relations with Eastern Europe have been growing ever more aware of the unique status of the religious communities in those countries and their potential importance in the future development of their socieities. In all the countries studied by Keston College, the Churches and other religious institutions are the only legally existing organisations which are not inspired, led and run by the ruling party. Hence any citizens interested in discussing alternatives of a social, political or ideological nature tend to gravitate towards these unique institutions.

The only substantial independent peace movement in Eastern Europe is sheltered by the Protestant Church in East Germany. Most leading figures in the originally secular Charter-77 human rights movement in Czechoslavakia are now Catholics. When the Solidarity movement began in Poland, Western viewers were surprised to see television pictures of striking workers kneeling in the mud to hear Mass.

It is in this context that the work of Keston College is of steadily increasing importance to all who are concerned with any aspect of East-West relations.

Dr. Spock

Ever since my first child joined our family 14 years ago, my wife and I have had on our bookshelves the famous book on child-raising by Dr. Benjamin Spock. We have turned to it in many a crisis and found it a never failing source of inspiration and information. We owe a lot to that book.

Now I know that Dr. Spock has his critics. It is said that his permissive childraising policies created a generation of spoilt brats and that he is responsible for many of the selfish and permissive features of today's society. Well I can't vouch for the truth or error of this assertion; it's a bit hard to judge a book ive when you are consulting it about such things as tonsils, german measles and nose-bleeds. Like most people we used the book rather than

Nonetheless I was very interested to see in the newspaper recently some comments from Dr. Spock about child-rearing. Whether he's changed his mind I can't say, but his argument now is this: that children should be trained in the spirit of service rather than self-

Now there's a thoroughly Christian goal, and one that is a direct challenge to contemporary ideas. Jesus' teaching is clear: 'he who loves his life will lose it'; love for God and for one's neighbour is the ideal; the purpose of life is to give – even to the extent of giving oneself in voluntary self-sacrifice to death if this were necessary. There can be no compromise here with the indulgent spirit of this age; the ego-centred attempt to find satisfaction for yourself as the goal

Dr. Spock sees the obvious, even though others don't. Not only is the ethic of Jesus right and therefore worth following come what may, the ethic of Jesus is the only way for human beings to find any satisfaction at all. The reason is plain. We are born to love others, and the only one a self-centred person can love is themselves. Has your life been wrecked by a self-centred person? Has it been you? There's time to change; you on follow Jesus and become like hind up your quest for self-fulfilmen submit your life to Jesus - n

"Abraham" - a first for Austraja

Aware of cultural differences

The world premiere on 11 July of the original musical "Abraham" was an encouraging and entertaining experience

"Abraham" was written by two members of St. Paul's Carlingford. Dr. Geoff Shead wrote the lyrics and his son Jonathan composed the music.

Others from the congregation took on the role of actors and actresses, band members and production staff. The team and cast comprised 60 persons, not to mention the stage hands and 'home

Jon Shead, who wrote all the music both directed the band and played piano. His music was more than an enhancement to the singing.

The chorus 'Will he pack up and go?' was a good reminder of the conflict Abraham faced as he decided about obeying God's call. Abraham's solo 'I'm all confused' highlighted his humanness The conflict of decision-making was clearly identified.

Dr. Geoff Shead, who wrote "Abraham", said he'd decided to write a musical beause of difficulties with copyright of other shows. He was also aware of cultural differences in 'American style' musicals. It was an adventure in faith which God has obviously honoured and will continue to bless.

WORLD REVIEW

U.S. church membership grows

Nearly one percent

Churches in the U.S. registered an overall growth in membership of nearly one percent in 1984, continuing a patter in recent years in which membership figures have kept pace with population growth, according to statistics in the newly published Yearbook of American and Canadian Churches in 1986.

A large religious body reporting significant membership increase was the Assemblies of God, with a net increase of 2.19 percent, to a total membership of 2,628,133. The Southern Baptist Convention, with a net increase of 1.16 percent, reached a total members 14,341,821, remaining the largest Protestant denomination in the U.S.

Mainline churches showed only small membership losses compared to past years. The United Methodist Church reported a 1.16 percent decline from 1982 to 1983, the most recent year for which they have statistics available, and other mainline bodies reported losses of one percent from 1983 to 1984.

the smaller church bodies in p growth was the Presbyterian merica, with a 7.85 percent 168,239. Jehovah's Witnesses 38 percent increase to d the Christian Reformed ew 5.2 percent to 224,764.

Police persecute red light Christians

Christians, fighting Filipino sex rackets fuelled by poverty, are being persecuted by corrupt police, according to a World Vision official just back from the Philippines.

Donor services director Bert O'Brien says "Christians working among Manila's prostitutes are being harassed by police and detained for minor traffic offences.

The intimidation - which O'Brien slams as "absurd, given Manila's usual traffic anarchy" — could be linked to a prostitution explosion masterminded by Australian criminals.

"There is strong evidence to suggest prostitution is on the increase in Manila My information is that about 60% of the city's bars and brothels are owned by Australians," says O'Brien

With two-thirds of the nation's 56 million living in poverty, 20% unemployment, 40% under-employment and a crippling $26 billion foreign debt, increasing numbers of Filipinos are turning to prostitution for survival.

One of the most disturbing aspects of this trend is the involvement of children up to 14 years of age. "It has been estimated that Manila now contains about 60,000 street urchins — a majority of them are involved in prostitution and/ or pornography," says O'Brien.

The profound poverty fuelling this sex racket explosion means that Christians counselling prostitutes are being challenged to find them work alternative rather than make easy moral judgements.

"Many women who turn to prostitution are faced with an agonizing choice — watching their children die from malnutrition or working as prostitutes to afford the food needed for survival," says O'Brien

"Prostitution is undertaken by others as a second job on an occasional basis to get money to helperelatives with specific needs such as medicine or schooling

The importance of breaking the poverty/prostitution nexus has prompted World Vision to help establish a restaurant run by reformed prostitutes in Olongapo City, north of Manila.

Urbanization of the World War will be the emphasis at Urbana '87, according to John Kyle, director of the trienniel Student Missions Convention. Although speakers will still discuss the unreached people group strategy for reaching the world with the gospel of Jesus Christ, that strategy will be explained in light of the influx of people to the cities of the world.

Floods and religious freedom in China

Four Christians arrested

As the most severe flooding in 50 years caused by Typhoon Peggy washed away 540,000 hectares of farmland, destroye hundreds of bridges, trapped 300,000 people, demolished 264,000 homes, njured 1,250 individuals and killed 172 people, it also severely damaged China's claim of true religious freedo

As homemade Bibles and Christian literature were flooded out of the Christian homes by the torrential rains the authorities quickly collected the evidence and promptly arrested at least four Christians who were connected with the privately printed materials. Why are they detained because of producing these badly needed Scriptures and Christian materials? What is the difference between a homemade New Testament and an officially printed New Testament? These are the questions currently being asked. They suggest that there is not religious freedom as claimed by the Chinese authorities.

New Dean of Chester

Canon Stephen Smalley is to be the new Dean of Chester Cathedral

Dr. Smalley, 55, a family man with two young children, is known chiefly for his expertise in the New Testament and in particular to recent publications on John's Gospel and the Johannine letters.

A former member of the Doctrine Commission, he is recognised both as an academic and as a powerful public exponent of the faith.

He has been Canon Residentiary and Precentor of Coventry Cathedral for the past nine years. He previously lectured in New Testament at Ibadan University, Nigeria, and at Manchester University.

China push for education in atheism

Pressure on non-communist leaders

Education in atheism is a proper part of scientific education, according to Jiang Ping, one of the vice-directors of the Chinese Communist Party's United Front Work Department (UFWD), The UFWD is with non-communist leaders in the society. Jiang made these statements in a major article that appeared in the 1 May 1986 issue of Red Flag, the Party's ideological journal.

The first section of Jiang's article dealt with the Marxist theory of religion. He attacked theorists who have begun to challenge the Marxist dictum that "Religion is the opium of the people." He quoted Lenin to assert that this proposition was the foundation of Marx's view of religion. Jiang briefly examined the theories that this concept was not original with Marx, or that the theory was out of date. He further argued that religion was not a permanent characteristic of human beings but a product of history. In the reform movements in China, people have begun to question Marx's and Lenin's views of religion, and Jiang appears to want to stop what he sees as speculation.

Jiang also dealt with the Party's religious policy. He focussed on the ideological responsibilities of the Party. He linked the study of science with the propagation of atheism as a main task. "To suppose," he said, "that to propagate atheism is to persist in 'leftist' thinking and upset religious feeling and that therefore we should not raise the slogans of atheism or propagate atheism is precisely the wrong understanding of the Party's policy on the freedom of religious belief." There is no contradiction, he continued, between propagating atheism and guaranteeing freedom of religious belief.

Maintenance? Or Mission?

Growth in Ministry

Some clergy and parish councils opt or Maintenance, others for Mission.

Maintenance

Clergy are not trained in the skills of Ministry, though well-trained in its Theology. They are not trained in management-by-objectives, or in the management of people, or of themselves or of their time. They know nothing of Goal-setting, unless they picked it up themselves or had business training

So most clergy opt, unknowingly, for Maintenance. They know no other way

Maintenance means preservation, of what is happening and usually of what members find reassuring from the past. Its purpose is to maintain a Church's survival, and particular tradition, with as little "rocking of the boat" as possible, with maybe a vague aim such as "to preach the Gospel" and occasional efforts to spread it.

It aims at Efficiency (doing things right) rather than Effectiveness (doing right things), though its efficiency sometimes surprisingly can result in effectiveness, and sometimes in numerical growth.

Permanent tenure for clergy means there is no automatic, regular, inbuilt evaluation process of where we are going, or where we are at, to disturb the nance approach Mission, on the other hand, sees the purpose of a congregation "to proclaim the wonderful deeds of God" (1 Peter 2:9) in addition to the Maintenance ("to build a spiritual house and offer spiritual sacrifices" (v.5), i.e. Mission as vell as Maintenance.

It therefore deliberately structures and programmes for numerical growth, being discontent with Efficiency only. It knows the truth of "the Church that lives for itself will die by itself". It knows it is "the only group in the world that exists for the benefit of its non-members"

So it plans its work . . . then works its

Mission, not Maintenance

Though Mission is harder, it is the -* Bible Command — we are not only to declare", but to "make disciples" (Matt 28:20), for as Jesus was sent (John 17:18), * Bible Plan — God is a Planner! His "plan is to bring all creation together with Christ as the Head" (Eph. 1:10). This "Secret Plan" (3:9) is to be effected through the church" (3:10)!

* Bible Need — without the Christ of our Mission, people are "without hope and without God" (2:12); two-thirds of the world are still without

So a thinking Pastor plans for Mission

Strategic Planning

Planning begins not only with, What does the Bible say? but also, What does it say to our congregation? What needs can we meet in our members, then in our nunity, then in the wider world?

* Our Mission: Why are we here? A questions, and also plan his teaching and preaching in order to make his elders and leaders biblically alert, so that they too begin to ask the same questions, and begin to seek and find answers.

In this way, perspective will shift from Maintenance to Mission. It may take 3 or 4 years, or it could be accelerated by think-tanks, congregation and community surveys, local council statistics, population shifts and make-up, and so on.

* Congregation Assessment: Where are we? Having discovered our Mission, we assess where we are in relationsip to it. Experts can be called in, houseparties used, or conferences planned, but a simple self-assessment is to ask small Home Meetings held specially if need be to discuss, What are our strengths? What are our Weaknesses? What are our

Held preferably on separate occasions, discussion of these three questions will begin the process of members themselves owning the Vision and the Goals when they are later set, rather than having them imposed on them as unwilling or uncomprehending subjects

* Goals: Where do we want to be? Having assessed our present state, yet knowing our Mission, we can now set goals in its pursuit.

Goals need to be a) Measurable, so that we will know when we achieve them, e.g. instead of a vague goal such as We Aim to Spread the Gospel Next Year, a measurable goal is to plan 2 letterbox drops, a series of Coffee mornings, and a Playgroup; b) ownable by members as well as leaders, for nobody is as apathetic as he who pursues someone else's goals; c) controllable, i.e. able to be changed, it for example an earthquake strikes, or

* Implementing: How do we get there The steps needed to pursue the goals are given priorities, when they are to be taken is documented, who is to take responsibility for them is determined, what resources needed are discovered and 2 or 3 monitors to watch the process

* Evaluation: How close did we get? At the end of the period, the moni report can lead to the Planning Cycle beginning again. In addition to reports and surveys, personal interviews are most desirable, to discover how members actually "feel" about the last Planning

So ...

Mission is to be a congregation's style. Its Strategic Planning for Mission will of course be undergirded by Prayer, the prayer that knows God is unwilling for any to perish (2 Peter 3:9), and will thus lay hold of His willingness rather than having to overcome His reluctance.

And in all this, a Pastor will know he has to Plan . . . for to aim at Nothing is certain to achieve it!

To fail to Plan . . . is to plan to fail!

BCQ launches building fund

More applicants than houses

The Bible College of Queensland has launched a $120,000 fund to erect multipurpose residential units on its Toowong campus to accommodate up to 18 additional students, including married couples.

Details were announced by the Principal, Mr. Ken Newton and the Chairman of the Board, Mr. Alan Shanks at the college's second annual Open Day held on July 26th. Mr. Newton said, "At the commencement of this year, we held our breath as we finalised applications. We had, for the first time in recent history, more applicants than we could comfortably house. Eventually, by utilising all available space, including the guest room and a passageway, we housed fifty students and eight children. About 10 other students live off campus. It is obviously time to build."

Mr. Newton appealed to friends and supporters of the college and those who and training for Christian service generally to assist the college expand to meet present and future opportunities. He said. "We need your help now to make this vision a reality. We are stepping out in faith, despite the uncertainties of the economy because we believe that this is the time God would have us move There are many people who have stood by us over the years. We ask you to help us again as we move forward now."

Plans provide for three single storey units to be built in stages. They will be erected in the middle of the college property, down behind the present buildings. It is expected that work will commence by November so that the new accommodation will be ready for 1987. The erection of these new buildings will free up some space in the existing facilities for other use, such as expansion of the library and provision of n office and classroom space.

"Grief" book sales approach 40,000

Overseas interest

More than 40,000 copies of the book "Christians Grieve Too" will soon be in print. The book is one of three written b Sydney Anglican clergyman, the Rev. Donald Howard.

In the 1970s he wrote a book on the family which sold 3000 copies by private distribution, and his course on "Sharing the Gospel" is now being reprinted.

Mr. Howard said he wrote the book on grief after the death of his wife Diana in 1977.

"There was a lot of material around but most of it was so 'mushy' and misleading that I decided to write a book based on my own experience," he said.

The Banner of Truth Trust had overseas rights and had published 20,000 copies in its first edition and was planning a second edition of 10,000.

Mr. Howard's "The Family - Here Today, Gone Tomorrow?" has been widely quoted in the Christian and secular press, and has recently sold out.

The Anglican Radio Unit in Sydney is preparing a second edition of Don Howard's "Sharing the Gospel", a course of six taped lessons, undertaken as a joint venture between the radio unit and the Department of Evangelism of the Sydner Diocese.

I must confess I did not expect to hear the thoroughly modern Sarah Ferguson, now Duchess of York, promise to obey her husband. Nor did I expect such an articulate defence of her vow

She went on to confirm that she wa she went on to contrin that she was nobody's yes-woman. However, should a time come when she and Andrew could not resolve a problem through mutual discussion, Sarah felt that Andrew should make the final decision, "because he's the man of the

What is prayer?

In your issue of 28 July you published an article by Graham Cole entitled "Meditative prayer: A critical look"

In it, Mr. Cole writes that "petition is the defining feature of biblical praying". It seems from his article, and I hope I am not misrepresenting his position, that he believes that petition is the only form of biblical prayer.

If this be his position, how do we classify the praise and adoration and thanksgiving which run like golden warp threads through the

And why is meditation on biblical texts and nes not a form of prayer?

Mr. Cole refers to Psalm 46:10. Why is being still and knowing that God is God not a form

Why, indeed, given Paul's occasional abandonment of his mind and words to the care of the Spirit (Romans 8:26-27) must prayer always be logical and verbal?

me several times a day with a list of requests and had no other relationship with me. Even if all the requests were consistent with my character and purposes, I would regard my child as being extremely odd, and our relationship a very impoverished one.

In ten years as a Christian, most of my genuine problems with prayer (as opposed to problems like sloth and ingratitude) have been caused by my attempts to pray in ways which suited other people very well and which did not suit me in the least.

I have, for instance, a problem with praying in words. I keep editing the words to make them sound better. This is ridiculous, because God knows what I am talking about before I form it into words, and there is the additional problem that my mental editing can convert heartfelt truths into high-sounding lies.

And so I very often find myself praying in images, or in silence, or in a simple read out to my Abba. And whether I am reaching outward or inward seems to me to be entired a matter of indifference. God pervades the universe, Christ is in us, and prepositions of direction are scarcely an important issue

Romans 14 should make us wary of being too critical about the way in which oth Christians pray. The article mentions Julian of Norwich, Teresa of Avila and John of the Cross. Read their works. These were Christ-centred people. Graham Cole will, I am sure, be meeting them in Heaven

What is prayer? We can early assume that what is prayer? We can early assume that we know the answer. However, the meaning of "prayer" in the Bible is more limited in scope than most Christians realize (the word "church", similarly). Prayer means petition. We tend to use the word "prayer" though as a portmanteau word to cover every kind of address to God. But is this the biblical use? I think not. To say this doesn't mean, of cou think not. Is 34y this doesn't mean, of course, that praise, thanksgiving are not the very fabrio of Christian life. Their importance is undeniable, but they are not petition. The issues then are the natures of prayer and meditation — biblically considered. My argument — and I stand by it — is that they are distinct activities and concepts when viewed biblically. Sadly, our English translations do not always help us here, nor

Sea ministry faces land challenge

"CHRISTIAN SMALL BOAT MINISTRIES" ministry) is facing one of its greatest challenges, viz. the acquisition property on the Mary River in Queensland, where an Administration Centre, a Training Centre and a Shipping Base can be established. The C.S.B.M came into being over ten years ago when Jeff Anderson, with over 30 years sea faring experience, including 25 years with the Royal Australian Navy, and his wife Joan, a medical doctor, were called of God to build a boat for His purposes. They built the "HAGGAI" — "the messenger of God" — a 55 foot sailing cutter, to provide transport and accommodation for indigenous and expatriate ministry teams, meeting the needs of people spiritually, materially and

"The crisis of Anglicanism"

That the Anglican Church is like a boat that is in danger of capsizing, and indeed of slowly sinking entirely, no thinking or discerning Anglican will deny. Over the centuries Anglicanism has had its crises and occasionally has shed individuals or groups that have wanted to push it too far.

On the surface, the present crisis would seem to be caused by the subject of the ordination of women to the priesthood. But, with some judicious probing, it is evident that there are even deeper, underlying causes: fundamental theological differences. Amongst the proponents of women's ordination and amongst some Anglican church "leaders" there are some who seem intent on pulling up the very planks which have helped keep the Anglican ship afloat.

The Bishop of Durham continues to voice his doubts: he has now been reported as "warning the General Synod of the Church of England against associating miracles with God." His comments received the plaudits of a good number of the Synod. It would not be unfair to state that there would be those in Australian Anglican church synods who would also join such applause.

Certainly none of this should take the Anglican church by surprise. This century particularly there have been church leaders, and especially theologians who have denied the possibility of the God of creation deliberately stepping on to and intervening in the arena of history by performing "supernatural acts"

What is more significant is the way the protagonists of various positions attempt to undergird their theology from the Bible. The pluralism of the Anglican church at present does not stem so much from whether or not the Bible is accepted, but rather how the Bible is approached: the presuppositions one has. Is the Bible a book which conveys through various literary forms and devices, men's thoughts and reflections about God, and these all culturally conditioned? Or can we still affirm, with the thirty-nine articles, that the Bible is "God's Word written"; that is, God's self-disclosure made through the writings of

Has the time arrived for those who disagree with the removal of the "traditionally accepted" planks, to cast off from the sinking boat of Anglicanism and set sail in another or less leaky craft? Or is there some way that those who are seen to create the holes in the boat be set adrift themselves? Certainly to increase the degree of pluralism already evident in Anglicanism will in itself rend the church asunder.

The present crisis is cause for grave concern — even for tears. But it ought to be reckoned that no denomination, no church will be perfect before the eschaton. It is more important than even that those who wish to remain faithful to the "apostolic faith" enshrined in Anglicanism, should stay aboard and continue to work at their proclamation of the apostolic gospel; there ought to be a seeking out of opportunity for encouragement of like-minded Anglicans, who share the same presuppositions concerning the Bible, the same gospel of Christ, the same faith, and the same Anglican framework shaped by the Book of Common Prayer and the thirty-nine articles. Above all, those who hold to a thoroughly biblical supernaturalism, should continue to pray to the God and Father of the Lord Jesus Christ, for His mercy towards His people and the continual adding to His Church those whom He would save.

My Scripture Union readings have been leading me lately into the green pastures of the book of Isaiah, best loved for me of all the Old Testament books. The Daily Bread notes, however, cover only selections of the Old Testament, and I like to read the in-between bits too.

This time round I was struck by the constantly recurring phrase "in that day" It refers to the multi-faceted and bewildering characteristics of the "day of the Lord" — times of future judgement and glory combined, both terror and joy threat and promise, often with both a local and a universal application.

That Day

"In that day", swords will be beaten into ploughshares, and spears into pruning hooks. (Ch 2:4) War will be no more. I wonder if we can now paraphrase it that nuclear warheads will be transformed into tractors and missiles into harvesters? God will reign, judging with righteousness. Yet in that day also will be the terror of men fleeing to the caverns in the rocks, hiding from that judgement. (v. 10).

The suggestion is of a time, or various times, of great distress with the survival of a remnant only, who will then experience cleansing and comfort (eg. "In that day ... the Lord will wash away the filth of the women of Zion; he will cleanse the bloodstains from Jerusalem by a spirit of judgement and a spirit of fire." Isaiah 4:2, 4 N.I.V.) The imagery used by Isaiah is of course related to the time he was writing, and partial fulfilments of his prophecies occurred in Old and New Testament times and places. The symbolism however, is universal, with the ultimate, ideal fulfilment still to come.

As the book progresses, the promise of comfort and glory and of the coming Suffering Servant/King accumulate. The Child was to be called Wonderful or, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace. For all its familiarity, the wonder of that prophecy never fails to strike me afresh.

The Living Book

Memorised Scripture

When I was a new young Christian in my teens I used to learn by heart verses which appealed to me. My initial sed Version learning refuses to be dislodged by any subsequent versions, though I switched to the R.S.V. within a year or two. Much of that memorisa even whole chapters, was of Isaiah. That is one of the delights of rereading the book - so much of it is deeply familiar. There are promises like "Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace whose mind is staved on thee" (Ch. 26:3), one that means a lot to me.

This is a subjective promise, relating to what one who trusts in God may experience inwardly in any age of circumstances. As such it differs from an objective prophecy regarding some specific future event. I have often consciously claimed it, especially in times of crisis or anxiety. I remember doing so while driving to my parents' home after receiving word that my father had been found dead on the front lawn from a heart attack. I needed to gather strength and peace to cope with my own shock and grief and to be an anchor for my mother and other family members.

Coping with Crisis

Similar promises of steadiness and strength in crisis are "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength" (Ch. 30:15) and "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary: and they shall walk and not faint". (Ch. 40:31) Often they lodge all the more securely in memory if they are set to music, in which case one can sing peace to a troubled heart. It's not an automatic, positive thinking kind of magic, however. We for our part have to be in obedient relationship to the Lord. waiting on Him, returning to Him in repentance, and steadying our minds on Him — then He supplies most wonderfully the promised peace and

Applying the Word

I know there are some who scoff at the devotional and specific application of Scripture, suggesting that it often wrenches the words out of context. That is something we have to be careful about, especially in regard to guidance.

In his foreword to the book Prophets of Revolution (Gonzales and Wooding pub. Hodder & Stoughton) the story of a Mexican evangelist amid the revolutionary upheaval of Latin America, Brother Andrew tells this story: "As I picked up my Bible for my daily reading, I saw a verse which came to me as a strong message from the Lord. It is John 9:4 'Night comes, when no one can work. As I looked around me in Latin America, I saw dark clouds on every side. Night is coming! God spoke to me so clearly."

Later that morning, he shared the thought with a group of theologians and pastors. He thought the message was received until, over lunch, one of the theologians said, "Andrew, we've looked it up in the original. John 9:4 probably only refers to the following night when Jesus was going to arrested. On that night they would not be able to do any work It has no further meaning for us today."

This attitude saddened Brother Andrew, and I'm on his side. Without disregarding scholarship or common sense, we must allow the Spirit of God to nate parts of the Bible to our hearts, to challenge or to comfort us. Otherwise, however well we know it, it mes a dead book

Leprosy Week 1986

5000 new sufferers each week

Leprosy is a disease no-one wants to hear about these days. People think it is a thing of the past, some terrible scourge of Bible days, but not in the 1980s. However, world health authorities claim otherwise. Current estimates state that approximately 5000 people contract leprosy each week somewhere around the world, and there are in the vicinity of 15 million leprosy sufferers in the world today, of whom only one quarter are able to receive effective treatment

These are some of the facts which rompted The Leprosy Mission to establish the Australian "LEPROSY WEEK" in 1984 which was launched in Melbourne by the Governor-General, Sir

South Africa: different views, same problem

1. Zambia

Economic sanctions were the only way to bring an end to apartheid in South Africa, Zambian president, Dr. Kenneth Kaunda, has maintained.

President Kaunda agreed that the effect of Zambia's sanctions alone on South Africa appeared to be minimal. But he said that if many nations were united on Bishop Owen Dowling said this during his presidential address to the Anglican diocesan synod in Goulburn.

Bishop Dowling told the Synod he believed Anglicans in Australia needed to express their solidarity with the oppressed peoples of South Africa and with Bishop Tutu and other fellow Anglicans working for change.

sident Kaunda of Zambia receives a copy of new Chinamwanga Bible from 115-year-old Mr. nald Siwale, one of the Bible's translators. Mr. Siwale is supported by B.S. Chairman, Mr. Chileshe.

the question of sanctions, the effect on South Africa would become too significant to ignore.

He made the comments to World Vision leaders at State House, Lusaka.

President Kaunda promised Zambia would continue to apply sanctions ever though the effects were hurting the country terribly.

Despite the economic hardship. President Kaunda said he believed that Zambia was being guided by God. "I believe that it is God's wish that we should play that role. He has always shown us the way.

"We have gone through very dark days and have sacrificed a lot. I realize what a material contribution we have made, sometimes by missing out on development, sometimes an actual cost.

"always a price to pay for the liberation of God's children"

"But God has given us that opportunity to contribute. In the same way He will give us material with which to continue in His service.

'Since He has done so much with us in 20 years, I have no reason to doubt that He could not do the same with South Africa.

"We are scared, sometimes very seriously, about the future, but then there's always a price to pay for the liberation of God's child. I think it's going to be a very cruel situation developing in South Africa.

"I don't think we have much more than two or three years to go before the explosion takes place.

"It's not something I relish, that is why find ways to avert that catastrophe — because it is going to be a catastrophe

2. Canberra — Goulburn Synod

"There was greater immorality in not bringing any real pressure for change to bear on the South African white minority ment than in sanctions which Mr. labelled 'immoral'.

In this synod we have the opportunity to add our small voice to others who are calling for the imposition of sanctions or "greater immorality is not bringing any real pressure"

"Mr. Reagan referred to such sanctions as immoral, but many of us feel that there is a greater immorality in not bringing any real pressure to bear on the white nority government for change, or even the promise or hope of change.

"I have admiration for Mr. Fraser and his impressive role in the Eminent Persons Group. Mr. Fraser maintains strongly that if remedial action is not taken soon, there is no other possibility down the track than a disastrous civil war. The fact that a former leader from the conservative side of politics has spoken this way, after careful examination of the whole situation, is noteworthy."

In proposing a motion about sanctions, Mr. Russell Rollason said he believed sanctions would begin substantial pressure to begin talks.

"If change does not occur quickly, we can only fear the worst. The application of sanctions can speed up the process of

The Rev. Dr. Edwin Byford, from Canberra, said it was important that support for the black people of South Africa be in the terms they have requested.

"Christians in South Africa are strongly urging us to impose sanctions", he said.

The Synod agreed to send a message of prayerful solidarity to the South African Council of Churches and to Bishop Desmond Tutu, expressing hope for a speedy end to apartheid and an end to

It was agreed to call upon the Federal Government to apply sanctions against South Africa as soon as possible.

Synod also called upon the Government to increase substantially the development assistance provided to the South Africa Development Co-ordinate Conference to alleviate any negative effects from sanctions on these

It called upon the Government to increase assistance to education and training for blacks and coloured people in South Africa and Namibia

3. Michael Cassidy

The Christian Church is playing, and will continue to play a critical role in the future destiny of South Africa.

This is the strong view of Michael Cassidy, visiting South African evangelist, who believes that the biggest and greatest thing concerned Australian Christians can do is to pray. Specifically they should be praying for spiritual wisdom, emotional fortitude and physical protection for South Africa's Christian

"Time is running out in my country", Mr. Cassidy said. Michael Cassidy is the founder and Senior Team Leader of African Enterprise, a leading Christian organisation in Africa. Jointly with Bishop Festo Kivengere, Anglican Bishop of Kigezi, Uganda, he leads a team of 50 ists committed to reaching the evangelists committed to reaching people of Africa with the Christian

Mr. Cassidy's first Sydney engagement in a busy two-week itinerary was a breakfast in the Dinning Room of the New South Wales Parliament. About 160 guests turned out on a freezing Sydney winter morning to hear that the Gospel of lesus Christ is not only revolutionising ives in South Africa, but is thrusting into the political scene in a manner few would have thought possible, and is offering the only real hope of peace in a situation fraught with complexity, conflict and

Most of the people at breakfast were referring to Chapter 3, verse 2 of that

Later, he told a Press Conference,

"I deplore the whole system of apartheid. But I do not want to see it replaced by something worse. I do not want to see an authoritarian black government. Neither do I want to see the communications of South Africa

"evangelism is integral to any answers"

Mr. Cassidy said that no lasting answe could be found for South Africa that did not involve the Dutch Reformed Church in some form of change.

"A significant religious component of our problem is that the Dutch Reformed Church has theologically legitimised apartheid. The Government has thrived on it. In October the Synod of the Dutch Reformed Church is due to debate whether or nor apartheid is heresy. If the Synod decides that it is heretical, the ethical rug will have been pulled from under the Government's feet."

"This is highly significant. Christians should be praying about the outcome,

A reporter asked Mr. Cassidy whether the National Initiative for Reconciliation of which he is chairman, was showing too much faith in the government's willingness to reform

He said: "There is a desire for refor his special inteeest in the ministry of "God alone knows the answers to the issues facing South Africa," he said.

"Most of the people are perplexed. On the political side the blacks wish to see majority rule while the Afrikaners want to see separate development. The outside world looks on and many urge sanctions government on the apartheid issue. "Since neither side can deliver, it seems to me that what I might call an 'X' factor is required. There needs to be a renewed spiritual dimension out of which some as a means of forcing the hand of the kind of political solution can come. "A spiritual revival is the great need of the hour in South Africa. We must unlock the hearts and minds of the people."

Mr. Cassidy said that he believes that evangelism is integral to any answers in South Africa.

"South Africa stands under the judgement of history and of God. The words of Habakkuk come to

In fairness, Mr. P. W. Botha, who is a man of some courage, has precipitated more change in five years than we have seen in the last 20 years." "Whether he knows it or not he has

30 hymns of the Wesleys David and till Wright, Exeter, The Samuel Wesley was born in 1662, the year the Book of Common Prayer was lished. He had 18 children, of whom Charles and John are most famous. His father was imprisoned when he refused to use the new prayer book.

This book selects 30 hymns from the nous output of this musical family. Charles alone wrote over 6000!

David and Jill Wright explain that the their concern that hymns which were originally written to clarify the faith have themselves become almost incomprehensible.

They are to be commended for a most enjoyable little book. Of course, occasionally they have very little interesting to say about a hymn or two. Not all hymns have exciting backdrops.

The book is systematically set out. Each hymn is fixed to a passage of scripture, then printed in full. Underneath the mn is set out the historical background, while on the opposite page the theological message.

The big drawback is a complete lack of indexes. One has to flick through the entire book to find if a particular hymn is the historical snippets most fascinating, eg., And can it be describes Charles Wesley's own conversion on Whitsunday 1738. O for a thousand tongues to sing was written to celebrate being a Christian for one year!

Threat of closure to South African | Underground Evangelism Council of Churches

The South African Council of Churches (SACC) faces closure by the South African

In a message to the World Council of Churches (WCC), the Secretary-General of the SACC, Dr. Beyers Naude, said the ncil's situation had become acute. The Government was increasing its efforts to block the work of providing assistance to victims of recent burnings and killings in the Crossroads Community outside Capetown. In a telephone conversation to the WCC. Beyers Naude said "I'll be contacting you about things I (now) don't want to talk

The Director of the SACC's Justice and Reconciliation Work, Walfram Kistner, who was recently released from detention, has been served with a severe restriction order which makes it impossible for him to continue his work effectively. Many of the 14 member Councils of the SACC function with difficulty or not at all because their staff have been detained.

On the 7th July the SAAC Offices were raided for the third time since the State of Emergency was declared on June 12th.

Late last month the SACC held its Annual National Conference. It issued a Document calling on all South African churches to proclaim a united witness in the present crisis. They particularly extended this invitation to the white Dutch Reformed Church which has so far not taken a stand against apartheid.

The Document warned that powers given to police and the Minister of Law and Order to proclaim unrest areas, without reference to Parliament and the Courts, increased the likelihood of a police state emerging in South Africa. The History and Membership

The South African Council of Churches (SACC) was founded in 1936, building on the South African General Missionary Conference begun in 1904. Membership of the Council is available to "all churches which are able to subscribe to the following doctrinal basis: a fellowship of churches which confess the Lord Jesus Christ as God and Saviour according to the Scriptures and therefore seek to fulfill their common calling to the glory of one God, Father, Son and Holy Ghost".
