Not "mumbo jumbo"

During February colourful opening ceremonies of the 1974 legal year were held in a number of cathedrals around Australia.

For the first time in Wollor gong's history four courts were sitting at the same time. Mr Jus-tice Isaacs said it was an historic occasion, indicative of the growth of Wollongong.

In his opening address at St Michael's provisional Cathedral, the Supreme Court justice said the Church and Law went handin-hand every day.

Mr Justice Isaacs referred to the administration of the oath, which ends "So help me, God." He said many people rattled this off "as if it is a bit of mumbojumbo." But it was a plea for Divine help.

A feature of the rally and of the long march that followed it was the very large proportion of young people who took part and were glad to carry banners and placards. He was especially critical of the "Austra-linn" which said there were only 2,500 at the rally. However, looking at the situation confronting our country from a Christian point of view there are a number of additional matters which ought to exercise our thoughts and prayers.

Among these is the question of the moral integri-y of the leaders presenting themselves for public endorsement. The Gair affair reflects credit on no

It may be that citizens on the whole are not greatly concerned for these, and are more interested in bread and butter politics, but Christians should be prepared to vote for the party or the candidate most likely to sup-port righteousness and truth and to act with integrity in the halls of power.

and now Lindsey and his fellow Zionists await someone to blow the Moslem Dome off its rock and to rebuild the temple. Following this prophetic coup Lindsey explains how the con-temporary world is shaping up for Armageddon. Russia, China, Africa, and the Common Market are all given as evidence for this system the doctrine of the secret rapture of the Church, the invention of a nineteenth-century mystic, is predictably asserted along with other details of the Dispensationalist system. The Central event is the return of Christ to set up a kingdom on earth in Jerusalem.

The Source

"The Source "The Late Great Planet Earth" is deceptive in appearing to give both a fresh approach and an ancient orthodoxy. In fact it gives neither. The ap-proach is not fresh but a rehash, and the doctrine is not an an-cient orthodoxy but a nineteenth century novelry.

To be sure various forms of teaching about the thousand-year or millennial reign of Christ on earth have existed from early times, but the intricate system of times, but the intricate system of modern pre-millennialism which Lindsey expoinds is the child of the nineteenth-century Brethren movement, and particularly of J. N. Darby. This teaching was popularised in America by the Scofield Bible and, because it was identified with American fundamentalism, it has often been confused with evangelicalism and biblical or. evangelicalism and biblical or thodoxy.

The Errors

The principal error which Lindsey shares with all Dis-pensationalists (and most Pre-millennialists) is that of dogmati-cally asserting that all prophecy must be interpreted literally (pp 40 and 165). 40 and 165). It is instructive to note the range of biblical material which Lincisey concentrates on in order to make his arguments. Apart from the basic prophecies of the restoration of Israel, most of the references are drawn from the apocalyptic works such as Dan-iel, the "little apocalypses" in the gospels, and Revelation. Yet apo-calyptic as a mode of literary

GEARING UP FOR 'ENCOUNTER '75'

All Protestant denominations in Australia are beginning to gear up for a year of evangelism in 1975, using the resources of the "Encounter '75" program.

Several denominations which were already planning evange-listic outreach within their own denomination next year have now agreed to co-operate with the "Encounter '75" program.

the "Encounter '75" program. "Encounter '75" has seven phases and is an Australian ver-sion of the "Key '73" evange-listic outreach program in the United States. Phase One, "Pre-paring for Evangelism," includes a call to the church by heads of denominations to be issued prior to Christmas 1974. Church mem-bers will be called to pray for the campaign, to study the Bible's teaching on evangelism, and to train for various methods of evangelism.

Phase Two, "Evangelising in Neighbourhood." includes visiting door to door and using the telephone for conversational evangelism. It includes "dialogue evangelism, it includes thatogue evangelism" in private homes, and breakfasts and dinners where the Christian faith is explained. It also includes dis-tribution of scriptures through hopping centres and door to

Youth

Youth Phase Three, "Evangelising Youth and Children," covers camps and special functions, university outreach, daily vaca-tion Bible schools, and special evangelistic emphasis in Sunday Schools and Youth Groups. Phase Four, "Evangelising Where you Work," puts the emphasis on meetings in offices, factories and city locations. Phase Five, scheduled for De-cember 1975, to January 1976, is "Evangelism on Holidays," and Phase Six is "Evangelising Everywhere." Phase Seven is a

HYMNS AND HARMONY

There are many ways of introducing new hymns to a congregation (or is it vice-versa?) and there are few people who will not rise to the occasion if approached with the challenge of an unknown or little-known work.

Where there is a choir, try a quarter-hour session of hymns a month, the choir sitting among the congregation and singing in unison.

Introduce the new hymn, tell something about its back-ground and the reason for trying it. If the tune has been played for a week or two as a voluntary, some will recognise it immediately. If this is not practicable, introduce the new choice during a regular service, but always with some information about it and a tactfully worded challenge to the congregation.

Tegular service, but always with some information about it and a tactfully worded challenge to the congregation. Some churches hand out a list of a dozen or so hymns which are to be attempted in a year. In the beginning, never have more than one at any service; but as the year goes on it is often possible to include in one service three which have been learned previously. Tell the people and they will be encouraged. Where there is opportunity, ask the conductor or organist to choose one of the hymns on a weekly or formightly basis, or at least to suggest new tunes. This is a safeguard against lack of variety. It also makes them keen to explore opportunities they might otherwise neglect. Special hymn programs may be tried: Women writers; John Wales was presented to the Weish people a few years ago, one acquaintance looked through the aiphabetical list of tunes in Common Praise and found those from the land of song quite easy to identify (double "L." and so on). He also found a mine of musical gems. The Methodist Hymn-Book Companion (if you can find one) has some ideas, and much of the above came from an old copy.

through the unimpressive, strange though this may seem to us. Thus Psalm 8 says that out of the mouths of babes and suck-lings God has ordained strength in order that His power might be all the more demonstrated, and in Mt. 11 Jesus praised his heavenly Father because He had kept back knowledge of Himself from the wise and prudent and revealed it, as it were, to babes. St. Paul made the same reflections in I Cor. 1. He drew the attention of the Christians in Corinth to the unimpressive character that that early Christian congregation at Corinth presented. He said that God had not called into a knowledge of salvation many wise as the world counts wisdom, nor many great ones, nor noble, but he went on "God chose the foolish things of the world, that he might put to shame then that are wise; and God chose the weak things that are despised, did God chose, yea and the things that are despised, did God chose, yea and the things that are despised, did God chose, we are inclined to take the credit to ourselves. You will remember that this was the reason why Gideon's army had to be so drastically reduced. Otherwise the nation would have relied on the strength of its numbers, and would have vanuted itself against God say: "More the against God say: "More waknesses." <text><text><text><text> Inescapable idea Inescapable idea The critic may honestly question each biblical assertion taken by itself. But when he looks at the message as a whole, as it is contained in the events and ideas presented by the Bible, he can only submit, and acknowledge that all this could not have been imagined or ex-perienced by men without the intervention of God. The idea of a divine intervention in history is inescapable. Once this is con-ceded, the critic who finds diffi-culty in understanding or admit-tion will assume that the Bible is right rather than himself. — Paul Tournier.

Christ's example

Christ's example The principle of which I am speaking is clearly illustrated in the coming of Christ as man. He chose to be born into the home of a Galilean peasant, not home of the high privilege the was given, remained in obscutty thoughout the period of Christ's ministry and the early years of the Church. The should be noted that outside the gospels there is only one reference to the Virgin Mary in the rest of the New Testament. This is in the first chapter of as one amongst a group of than the strong Sometimes a feeling of disap-pointment arises in the Christ-ian's heart that the Church is not a more impressive body. It is constantly being ignored by the great ones of the world, and we wonder why this should be so, since it is the Church of God, the Almighty Creator; it is the body of Christ, the Divine Son of God; it is the sphere where the Holy Spirit is at work. But, although the Church has all these supernatural qualities, it is not very impressive by out-ward standards. However, the Bible tells us that this outward unimpressiveness is God's delib-erate policy.

ANNE BOLEYN by Hester W. Chapman. Jonathan Cape, 1974. 244 pages. Estg3.25. As a writer of historical biography, Miss Chapman is thoroughly at home in the Tudor and Stuart centuries and in this instance her work is not pejorative. Her gift for making the past come alive allow both Anne and Henry VIII to emerge as people, often the victims of their times but in Anne's case manipulating and in Henry's helping to shape the times. While she does not write with the sympathy of Froude, she is far from being pariisan. She introduces frequent quotations from Henry's private letters to Anne and these often reveal little-understood facets of Henry's character. One weakness is the scant attention 'she pays to Anne's strong Protestantism, although she admits that she first introduced Henry to the writings of the banished Tyndale.

she admits that she first introduced Henry to the writings of the banished Tyndale. HAPPY IN TROUBLE, Study Guide to Philippians by Francis Foulkes, Africa Christian Press, 1973, 103 pages. A most useful paperback commentary on Philippians which is even more than a commentary — a well-thought out and planned study guide for the individual or for group study. There are 26 studies altogether and each is given a chapter which has clear paragraph head-ings and ends with a suitable prayer on the theme studied and some suggestions for further study, including related Bible passages. The RSV text is boldly printed at the beginning of each study. LATIMER. Quarterly journal of the Anglican Evangelical Fellowship (NZ). March 1974. No 48, 28 pages, 30c, The issue has the theme, "Salvation Today," and Philip Thomas writes the editorial on "Bangkok and Beyond." After three pages of current comment, Leon Morris contributes "Sal-vation from what?" and two further papers. Four other brief articles, including one by John Stott, conclude a very good issue. "Latimer" is exceptionally well presented for a small period-ical and its use of type and general layout are quite superior. Add to this its perceptive articles and you have something worth every cent of the §1 a year subscription.

Turner moves up at CMS

The General Committee of the Church Missionary Society NSW of has announced the appointment of the Rev John Turner (pictured) as General Secretary of the Society. He succeeds the Rev David Hewetson, who resigned recently to return to the parish ministry.

John Turner was ordained in 1955 and has since then served in a number of parishes in-cluding Kingsgrove and Mow-bray, and as Sydney Diocesan Youth Chaplain.

He has always been interested and involved in mission and in 1963 attended the Christian Con-gress in Toronto, at which mis-sion was a key issue.

He is at present Commissary or Bishop Chitemo, Bishop of Morogoro.

He has for the last twelve months been Assistant General Secretary of C.M.S., N.S.W., and prior to that he served on the Society's Africa and Candidates Committees.

The constant of the constant of the constant of the constant of the groups were touched upon. In the frank discussion which followed, members of the groups expressed the opinion that there exerned to be a kind of cultural stalemate in the church — the conventional church set-up was just too formidable for non-church folk to face. They insisted that while their class values and material values had changed, their spiritual values had not.

recognised they had much to learn. Dr Morris, representing the Council members, assured them that older Christians had much, too, to learn from their younger brothers. He agreed that the movements represented a signifi-cant evangelical thrust that was not being recognised by the church. There was need for a cross-generation solidarity in matters on which evangelicals needed to speak. As an outcome of the dis-cussion, it was agreed that the groups represented should meet together again for an unhurried time of prayer together. As anal committee was to be set up to arrange a seminar, when some of the problems of communication would be looked into.

A suggestion which met with the approval of all was that the next Congress should be on the subject of The People of God' and that Christian counter-cul-ture groups be invited to partici-pate in planning it.

No N.Z. Church Union

Union The General Synod of the Church of the Province of New Zealand resolved to require a two-thirds majority before agree-ing to organic union with the Churches of Christ, the Method-ist Church and the Presbyterian Church. After lengthy debate, the vote was narrowly lost, by bishops voting 6 for and 2 against, and laity 21 for and 9 against. It was then decided to refer the matter back to the diocesan synods for further consideration.
