Evangelicals and Roman Catholicism today

Evangelical Christians must be aware that attitudes which were honestly, sincerely and correctly held about ten years ago towards Roman Catholicism will not stand up to a frank examination today.

If we speak of the Roman Catholic denomination in the same terms that we used ten years ago, we may well be victims of the rigidity and intransigence which we fondly believe only marks others. Admittedly, the Roman system was frozen into an unyielding, corrupt, unbiblical power structure by the Council of Trent and was little modified by the passing of four centuries.

While generalisations are dangerous, we can with certainty say that Vatican II (1962-1965) made possible the extraordinary changes that we have seen over the past eight years. Some parts of Roman Catholicism have fiercely resisted change and others have warmly accepted teach and write about differing views on vital matters of the Roman faith without fear of dismissal. Hans Kung is able to call himself a Catholic but to deny he is Roman. In this he denies his allegiance to the papal obedience. But he continues his teaching work.

In Australia, Rome is still very conservative and change comes much more slowly than in Holland, Belgium or Germany. But the Irish-Australian domination is weakening. Priests who speak out are moved to posts, where they can do less harm but they are not dismissed. Among Australian theologians there are wide divergences of opinion on matters of faith and bishop will disagree with bishop and theologian with theologian in ecumenic-

More and more, Roman Catholics are studying the More and more, Roman Catholics are studying the Bible and finding in it no support for doctrines which hitherto they had accepted on the basis of Tridentine decrees or tradition. It would be folly to deny that the Spirit of God is at work within Roman Catholicism today. And the Spirit is leading men towards the truth. We must be profoundly thankful for these exciting changes in our day.

It will not do to point to the persistence of false teaching, lack of Christian example and personal holiness in the lives of their ministers and people. The same can be said of evangelicals. And if we find intolerance, bit-terness and lack of love, are evangelical Christians exempt from these weaknesses?

The Keele statement in 1967 put the position of evan-gelical Anglicans very clearly: "We could not contemplate any form of re-union with Rome as she is." But it continues: "We welcome the new possibilities of dialogue with her on the basis-of Scripture.'

We must take this basis of dialogue seriously. The Reformation fathers laid it down clearly in their "sola

CHRISTIAN MINISTRY

ACTS 20:27 "I did not shrink from declaring unto you the whole counsel of God."

In the portion read as the epistle this morning the ministers of the church at Ephesus are called in one verse priests and in another verse bishops. Similar identity of nomenclature, and so of ministry and order, is found elsewhere in the New Testament but there are gradations of honour in this one ministry. "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honour, especially those who labour in the word and in teaching," enjoined St Paul in 1 Timothy 5:17.

Our brother, Donald Rob-

Our brother, Donald Rob-insoon, has certainly earned this encomium of labouring in the word and in teaching.

Beyond value

He is in the front rank of New Testament scholars. There is no one in the world, in my judg-ment, who equals him in gifts of biblical exegesis. He is a leader in our church in liturgical stud-ies.

of public testimony to his gifts and to his contribution to Moore

Vice Principal. His help and and his wise advice and timely comment have been beyond value. Moore College will greatly

What that ministry is, has of the diocese.

What that ministry is, has been set before us in the epistle read this morning from Acts 20. St Paul, the exemplar bishop, set his ministry before the priests, or bishops of Ephesus, to be the definitive ministry for christian ministers. It is a ministry of the Word of God, feeding God's people with his Word.

"Ye yourselves know," he said clear through revelation.

The whole counsel of God is the theme of the christian minister and it may be summed up in one word, "Christ." It is God's purposse that in Christ everything should find its fulfilment and perfection. He is the head over all things, by him all things in heaven and in earth have been created and are held together.

But before considering further

But before considering further this counsel of God, it is worth noting two points. First the apostle needed to lay the foundation of the knowledge of God's character, making clear who is the God, of whose counsel and purposes he was speaking.

He is God the creator, the sovereigh Lord whose direct and consistent will makes the sun to rise each day, who sends the rain, and withholds it in times of drought; God the righteous judge, who judges every man according to his works, even to the trifling idle word; the gracoius God, who has made this world beautiful, and who fills our hearts with joy and gladness through the consistency of his providence and the abundance of the natural resources of the world.

Righteous judge

In preaching to the Jews there was no need for St Paul to go over these things; they knew them well from the Old Testament. But in preaching to the Gentiles, whose knowledge of God amounted to nothing, in spite of their religiosity, and whom their altar to the unknown god was the best description of their relationship with the only true God, Paul needed to lay the foundation of the knowledge of God, the sovereign creator and righteous judge.

We are back to this position in our modern world. Modern society must be re-taught to believe in God the creator, the righteous judge, the gracious Paul's message.

He brought news about God's purposes, a world view to which he called his hearers to reorient themselves by repentance and faith. That is to say, to repent of the old way of thinking (and so of living) and to acknowledge Christ as Lord.

Our message deals with objective facts; facts which of course are not cold facts but which will suffuse joy in our hearts when we apprehend them. But the message deals primarily with objective fact and only secondarily with subjective experience which is consequential on apprehension of the truth. Do not be turned aside into bypaths, preaching temporary blessings.

Nor does St. Paul make any distinction between preaching to distinction between preaching to the converted and to the uncon-verted.

The message both groups need to hear is the same —Christ the whole counsel of Gods and the wisdom of God, so that all might repent and turn to God ever more fully and live by faith in obedient, trusting fellowship with Him more and more each day.

Him more and more each day.

In apprehending the whole counsel of God we must never forget that it has its centre in the cross of Christ. This is God's great action in history, when the devil and sin and death and all that they can do was resisted by our Saviour and overthrown, and the consequence of our sin undergone and annulled.

The cross must be central in

The cross must be central in our concept of God's purposes and in our preaching of this counsel — it is never far from St. Paul's thoughts.

Blood-bought

You will notice that in describing the congregation to which these presbyters are ministering he describes it as the church of God which He purchased with the blood of His Own. Notice also that in this passage St Paul describes his preaching as preaching the kingdom, that is preaching the cross, because God's kingdom or ruling was exercised at Calvary. There is no victory or Armageddon greater than Calvary.

You will notice also in the

You will notice also in the same passage how St Paul describes his preaching as preaching in the grace of God, because in the cross, God's character of love and goodness is clearly seen, and it is through character of love and gookiness is clearly seen, and it is through the forgiveness of the cross that we enter into God's favour and grace. So to preach the whole counsel of God, means to preach the cross with its implications, its antecedents and its con-sequences.

its antecedents and its con-sequences.

We are to preach the whole counsel of God, that is, to preach Christ requified for his enemies, Christ risen, Christ coming.

We are to preach with a heavenly perspective. St Paul re-minded the ministers at Ephesus "I coveted no man's silver or gold or apparel," and we might expand, he coveted no man's salary, position, house, view or whatever else it is that we are tempted to covet.

All these blessings are God's

All these blessings are God's gifts for us to enjoy, they are simply different foretastes of our heavenly experiences and not to be coveted before God gives

The test of our apprehension of the message is our freedom from these earthly values and objectives. For ours is a heaven-ly message and it bases itself starkly on the reality of God, and on the certainty of his pur-

We are to preach not only with a heavenly perspective as expressed in freedom from cov-etousness, but we are to conduct our ministry with personal con-cern for those with whom God's providence has brought us into contact.

Twice over in this passage St Paul referred to the fact that his ministry at Ephesus was accompanied by his tears. The study and the pulpit are not enough to fulfil such a ministry though doubtless the study and the pulpit are the staple. We know from the previous chapter that Paul's ministry at Aithens was based on a daily sermon full of thought and reasoning, delivered by the the assurance in the hall of Tyrranus.

The assurance

He taught them publicly, as he says. We cannot fulfil this public ministry without careful study and preparation. But the public ministry, fundamental though it is, is not enough. We must also teach privately from house to house, admonishing, exhorting and encouraging, as each person's situation requires.

We must also minister with person's situation requires.

We must also minister with diligence. "For three years" said St Paul, "I did not cease day or night to admonish every one of you with tears." The motivation of this diligence is the apprehension of the overwhelming significance and reality of the facts of the gospel, the full facts, the whole counsel of God.

Above all we are to preach with the assurance that the objective is certain. God has his people, much people, to be called into faith by His Word, ministered by us. And that Word will not be spoken without results.

St Paul concluded his admonition to the elders of Ephesus by commending his hearers to the word of God which is able to give them their inheritance with God's people in God's presence. God's word is powerful. It will accomplish its purposes. It will confer the inheritance on those who hear and it is to this word of God that we have been called as ministers.

You will notice this word "gift" which St Paul uses. "The word of His grace which is able to give you your inheritance."

We hear a lot about gifts these days, but this is the gift of God in our inheritance with His people. It is given by His word. But it must be the genuine word, accurately expected. accurately exegeted accurately exegeted.

This gift is a real fact and not merely a psychological elation, yet when it is apprehended it will certainly bring psychological elation, though not necessarily of the ebullient sort but more likely the deep abiding joy of the certainty of God's purposes in Christ towards us, that we have in fact laid up for us in heaven the crown of glory, which God only the word of God can bring this assurance and certain-ty, and we, believing this word, rejoice in the hope as he have fellowship with one another in the gospel, that is, in the know-ledge of the purposes of God. It is the making known this counsel and purposes that we have been called to be ministers.

St Paul's one object he told the Ephesians was that he might accomplish this course, and fulfill that ministry which he had received from the Lord Jesus to testify the news of the grace of God.

Every attempt was made to lay a cloak of respectability and glamour over the official opening of the casino at Wrest Point, Tasmania, on February 10.

nia, on February 10.

It was to be a glittering social occasion. Leading representatives from the worlds of politics, transport and industry paraded in front of TV cameras to praise the appointments at the casino and to predict its future success.

We were shown examples of the games that can be played at the casino. Betting games hitherto banned across the nation are now legal at Wrest Point.

It cannot be denied that the casino is an attractive building set in a beautiful position. There is no doubt that it will give a fillip to the Tasmanian economy by boosting the tourist industry in that State. But the casino is not just another hotel—it is a temple for the worship of money. Companies do not build and run casinos so that their patrons will take home more money than they came with. By the well-organised telecast on the night of the opening, by the two-hour-long lessons in gambling available to patrons on closed-circuit colour TV, by every possible means, the casino's owners aim to part patrons from their cash. They deliberately inflame the money-lust and avarice within us all.

What do they care about the

What do they care about the waste of gambled money that should have been spent on food, and clothes and other bills? What do they care for the misery, domestic disruption and financial instability that follow this indulgence of covetousness? It is an ironical touch that people's money should be wrested from them, under the guise of gambling thrills, at Wrest Point!

Those Victorians

How refreshing it is to read of someone who is prepared to stand up and be counted against the multiudes of detractors of the Victorian era.

P. R. Lawrence, of Moe, in a letter to the editor of the Gipps-land Church News says that "I believe the attempt to denigrate the Victorians, which has been sedulously fostered over the late years, is false and a delusion." And he is able to look objectively at the Victorian era, with its weaknesses as well as its great strengths. He concludes: "Compared with today's world, the Victorians enjoyed haleyon calm."

Lots more could be said for that era, as well as about its calm. A thorough study of the period will find much to its credit, credit which our age has already squandered. Simple but strong religious forces were at work. Family life was strong. There was a strong sense of duty and mutual interdependence. Moral consciousness was deep and there was an acknowledgement of good and evil for what they were.

evil for what they were.

It is all too easy to point out the flaws in Victorian society. There was much hypocrisy, lack of real concern, prudishness, and, we are told so often, mention of sex was taboo. But our society is now charged with being riddled by hypocrisy, one "does his own thing" and ignores everyone else and sex "freedom" has let loose an amoral rampage with its own special crop of disasters.

When people start debunking the Victorian era, you wonder if they are talking from a position of ignorance or to justify their own behaviour.

Only this past week I had the privilege of meeting a rather remarkable woman. Ivy is one of those rare species who are good at everything.

everything.

Now this is not an easy kind of person to be, or to work with. Ivy is very well educated, confident and a born organiser. Her teaching is efficient and crowned with success.

This could indeed be a formidable list, but the saving grace of the situation is that Ivy is a keen Christian. And although I am not nearly as well qualified, I felt completely at ease when I first met her. There is plenty of sheer goodness behind the efficiency.

ciplined and put in order except her health. She was telling me some of her trials when a thought struck me. "Are you able to relax?" I asked. Ivy smiled ruefully. "That's just my trouble," she confessed. "I take on too much and I'm getting out of step some-how."

Conscientious souls are apt to do this, perhaps when a colleague slackens and the work suffers. But this over-eagerness was beginning to take its toll. Fortunately Ivy saw the red light and began to slow up a little.

Over a cup of tea later she shared another matter. It seems that some of her pupils had been touched by a spiritual movement in the school. Cautiously, Ivy shared an incident.

"Tanya says she's converted now. But I do wonder. I don't see much change in her yet." It seems Tanya had been a real rebel.

"Ivy," I cautioned, "be patient

"Ivy," I cautioned, "be patient with her. I know these young-sters can be carried away with emotion, and we begin to wonder if their experience is genuine. But this is the very time she may need you to stand by her, to steer her through to calmer

"But I don't see any change in her," protested my friend.

"Not yet," I agreed. "But you know I was converted in my teens, and really when I look back and remember what a shallow Christian I was — the bricks I dropped — I almost writhe, But I don't because I know I'm forgiven. But I'm eternally grateful to one or two dedicated 'backstops' who saw me through."

I do hope that Ivy and Tanya can get together; they need each other. There's nothing like the joy of a new Christian, but if we look for perfection too soon we'll only be disappointed. And maybe do harm to the tender young plant.

There was a covenant, approved by church leaders of the Uniting Church in Sydney (January 25, 1971) and ratified in a conference at Dampier in the North-West on July 15, 1971. #### "In the cross of Christ I glory"

SIR — The mention ("ACR" January 25, 1973) of "Kairos 73" and the wooden crosses that are to be used in the procession at Canberra is the reason for this letter and I'm going to stick my neck out a long way and am quite prepared to be "axed."

Fifty years ago it was much easier to tell the denomination of a church by the fact that there was a cross on it. The case is very different now when was a cross on it. The case is very different now when churches of every denomination are using the idea more and more and building crosses into their church structure.

more and building crosses into their church structure.

Ask 99 out of 100 people who wear crosses on the person why they do so; would they be able to give a satisfactory answer? Take the same percentage and ask church-attenders why crosses are in churches; would they not be just as vague?

Surely there is a parallel in the statement of the Israelites taking the Ark of the Covenant into battle against the Philistines and saying, "That it may come among us and save us out of the hand of our enemies." Phinehas's son was rightly named "Ichabod," for the glory had departed. (Incidentally take the same percentage as above and ask the average churchman where that story is found in the Bible!)

The repeated references to the Bible!)

The repeated references to the Cross in the New Testament do not indicate that there was anything magical about the rough, splintery, unpolished piece of wood to which the Lord Jesus Christ was nailed except of course to remind us of the awful agony of such a death; for of

The same suggestion of it occurs in the incident mentioned occurs in the incident mentioned concerning what happened in good King Hezekiah's day when the people were actually worshipping the brazen serpent that Moses had made 800 years before at the command of God and for the purpose which God had in mind. But Hezekiah broke it in pieces and contemptiously. in pieces and contemptuously called it "a piece of brass" which was all it was.

was all it was.

When we need things to remind us of the glorious fact that "Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and that He was buried, and rose again the third day, according to the Scriptures" it's time we took stock of ourselves, Oh! for a Hezekiah to break all the crosses that are in existence in pieces!

I realise that there are godly that are in existence in pieces!

I realise that there are godly folk following the Lord far more closely than I am who differ widely from me in the sentiments I have expressed and we say with Paul, "Let everyone be fully persuaded in his own mind." Obviously I am not saying that everyone who wears or uses a cross is an apostate and I say this to preface my next remark which could easily be misconstrued by people who will be furious with me. I do say unhesitatingly that all this showmanship of crosses galore, on and in churches, on letterheads, on church notices, on persons, etc, etc, ad lib is a sad sign of the apostate age in which we are living when so many are "worshipping the creature rather than the Creator."

The effect of "Kairos 73" will the Creator."

The effect of "Kairos 73" will be far more powerful on the life of Canberra if every participant can truly demonstrate in their lives that they have been really born again by the Holy Spirit of God and if they leave their crosses behind.

Yours in the glorious name of Him who died for our sins and rose again for our justification.

The Father of every believer

The revelation of God as our Father shines through every part of Jesus' ministry. In the Sermon on the Mount, the eye of the Father is upon every facet of life. In the parable, the arms of the Father are even open to receive the prodigal, and his heart humble enough to go out and invite the elder brother to come in (Luke 15: 11-32). Some 171 times the Gospels place the word "Father" upon Jesus' lips, five times in the two verses of Luke 10:21, 22. In the agonies of Gethsemane he stayed himself on the will of his loving Abba Mark 14.36). He died praying. Father, forgive: Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit hands I commend my spirit (Luke 23:34, 46). The word of the Risen Lord is: "I ascend to my Father and your Father." (John 20:17). #### Clergy wives and Bible study

SIR—One aspect of the Sydney Clergy Wives' Conference planned for April is causing some of us some concern, and we would be glad if one of those responsible for its organisation could assure us through your paper that our concern is needless.

The Bible studies at the conference are to be taken by a well-known women's speaker and the title of the third of these studies is "The Glorious Outworking and Glad Conditions for the Filling of the Holy Spirit." So far as I am aware, the New Testament teaches plainly that the "conditions" for receiving the Holy Spirit have already been met for us in the death and ex-ultation of Christ, and that therefore the title chosen for this study indicates an irresponsible use of terms in view of the present size of the Pentecostal problem, or that the Clergy Wives' Conference is yet another Anglican body to capitulate to either pentecostal teaching about the Holy Spirit or an unbiblical

If the purpose of the move-ment is as stated, wherein lies its value? Should it not promote the ideals of unity?

Soul count

The human soul weighs 21 grammes (about three-quar-ters of an ounce), at least that's the belief of a Swedish doctor who insists he has evidence to prove it.

Dr Nils-Olof Jacobson Dr Nils-Olof Jacobson describes in a newly published book how he placed the beds of soon-to-die patients on sensitive scales. As the patients died and their souls left their bodies, he says, the needle dropped 21 grammes.

Dr Jacobson also suggests that a soul may go on leading a dream life, eating and drinking without realising it has left its earthly abode.

But you will have to wait to find out how he reaches these conclusions as his book, "Life after Death," is not yet available in this country. (Church of England Newspaper.)

New bishop for West Malaysia

The Archdeacon of West Malaysia (the Ven Gurubatham Savarimuthu) has been appointed Bishop of West Malaysia in succession to the Right Rev Roland Koh, who died while visiting America last November.

The new bishop, who was educated in India and ordained in 1951, has served the whole of his ministry in Malaysia.

only finish one or two a year. maybe in their holidays.

Yet how much of value there is in the printed page, as we share and learn from the Christian experience of others. The great trials and triumphs of missionaries and consent. The great trials and triumphs of missionaries past and present; the heart-searchings of our contemporaries as they seek ito serve Christ in our society; the wonders God works among the drug addicts and other groups; all these and much more is there, just waiting to be read and absorbed.

One of the women of St. Alban's, Perth, began to realise more fully the value of reading a year or so ago. The ever-present problem of time was the overwhelming enemy.

Many others were obviously in whelming enemy.

Many others were obviously in the same situation and when one is forever short of time, and unless one has some extra incentive, it is all too easy to go on ignoring the written page. With this in mind, a group of about a dozen interested young women of the parish decided to meet together each month and discuss a set book, much in the same way as secular book clubs operate.

There was a second aim in as second aim in mind: to provide an evening together where true fellowship could be shared around a focal point with a Christian message. In this way a variety of books has been read privately, then shared and discussed openly, giving rise to honest fellowship, good fun, and some debate. They include "God's Smuggler," "Dr Ida," "Taste of New Wine." "Habitation of Dragons," "Twelve Angels from Hell," "The Growing Years," "The Troubled Years," "David" and others.

One interesting sideline has been that some husbands are reading at home along with their wives and thus finding new fields of sharing and fellowship within the marriage. All in all, it seems a worthwhile and interesting experiment which looks like continuing indefinitely.

HOME BIBLE STUDIES, by Derek B. Copley (Patermaster), 1972. 108 pages. $2.05.

This is an excellent little book, full of encouragement to its readers to have home Bible studies, and full of practical advice on how to run such studies.

From his own experience, the writer tells of their value both for the strengthening of committed Christians and the winning of those who are not. It is a pity that such a little

DIVORCE

DIVORCE — the biblical teaching by John Stott, (Falcon Booklet), 1972

(Falcon Booklet), 1972, 20 pages, 30c.

This little book attempts to summarise the teaching of the main Bible passages dealing with marriage and divorce. The brevity of the treatment leaves the reader dissatisfied especially as the author offers us no indication that his "rigorist" conclusions by no means express the minds of all biblical interpreters.

B. L. Smith.

Churches of West Africa, he is at present working on a thesis at Dallas Theological Seminary in the USA, and hopes to complete this for his doctorate, then give his whole time to his new post by September of this year.

Mr Kato will also be the Executive Secretary of the Theological Commission. This commission will be concerned not only with such developments as theological education by extension, but also with the encouragement of theological reflection, research and publication in an African context. It will work closely with Theological Assistance Programme of the World Evangelical Fellowship. The second AEAM Commission is concerned with Christian Education. It will help churches with teaching their ordinary members, again in an African context, and will work for better leadership training and teaching materials.

Questions may be raised, of course, as to the dependence of the traditions upon the prior biblical tradition. Yet the evidence of travellers and more modernly, of purposive archeological forays, is tantalising enough to intrigue us.

The success or failure of the author's plans to mount a more author's plans to mount a more massive assault on the mountain may not cause many to change their positions, for we may generally read into archeological evidence what we in fact wish to read out. But this is an enthusiastic presentation by a scholarly conservative, interesting at least for its careful treatment of the Genesis material.

W. J. Dumbrell

OF CHRIST by Emily Gardiner Neal. Hodder & Stoughton, 1972. 174 pages. $5.40.

A view of healing

This book, by the author of 'A Reporter finds God,' tells the story of her life and ministry, as well as reciting many case histories of mental, emotional, spiritual and physical 'healings.'

Mrs Neal, herself almost a cripple for six years, admits that renewal of faith is as great a renewal of faith is as great a healing miracle as physical re-covery and even concedes that God may only heal through (after) death! Wholeness in Christ is as much her concern as health and some of the best Christian witnesses are still lying that on their beach.

Healing is presented in a high-ly sacramental context and the author advocates frequent 'communion' and sees a close connection between the blood of Christ and the health of the body. She even cites some cases of non sacramentalists who were not healed till they submitted to the sacramental healing rites.

A chapter on the charismatic revival is moderate by neo-pent-ecostal standards and sees gen-uine tongues as foreign languages.

The book is basically pastoral in tone and does offer some good advice in places, but lacks theological substance and so is inadequate for anyone hoping to find a doctrinal basis for the healing claims that are made.

Key Books ACR'S REVIEW EDITOR INTRODUCES IMPORTANT NEW TITLES: IMPORTANT NEW TITLES:

THE ELABORATE FUNERAL. Man, doom and God by Gavin Reid. Hodder and Stoughton, 1972. 191 pages. $5.95. Gavin Reid has given us a highly controversial book. Writing from a conservative Christian viewpoint, he has some very radical things to say about man, society and the church. Posing as a benefactor, television he sees as an uncontrollable monster wreaking its terrible will on society. The new morality is but revived immorality. The modern church is busy compromising itself with the modern spirit. Unlike the secular prophets who say man is moving towards his own funeral, Reid says that man is already taking part in his own elaborate funeral. A disturbing book, written by a thoughtful man, a shrewd observer and widely read.

TO RESIST OR SURRENDER? By Paul Tournier. Chime Paperbacks, John Knox Press, 1971 ed. 63 pages. SUS1. What do people do when those near to them exercise power or authority over them in the name of love, but are so often trying to make others unhealthily dependent upon them. Should they capitulate (and call it Christian humility) or call a halt and say no for the sake of their own mature Christian growth and integrity? No man is better able to look closely at this common human dilemma and expose its many facets than the great Tournier.

THE QUIET CAPTAIN, This concordance is virtually "pocket-size" and therefore necessarily limited in terms of contents. However, about 300 key theological terms such as grace, salvation and faith were chosen for proportionately heavier treatment.

Captain R. M. Stephens may not be a familiar name, but his life was worth recording. A naval staff officer by profession, he was also an organiser of Bible lands exhibitions and a rescuer of Jews from Nazi Germany.

His love for his Lord and his long standing concern for the Waldensian Church was expressed in his retirement in his travels with a donkey preaching the gospel in the villages of Italy. The story of his life is delightfully written by his son.

certain books from its collection on permanent loan with the library of the University of Newcastle. Some 1200 items have already been sent to the University library.

This is the first part of the perpetual loan and it includes over 100 pre-1800 items, among which are leather-bound and parchment editions of the Fathers mostly seventeenth and eighteenth century, sermons of Jeremy Taylor, Lancelot Andrews, etc, a 1743 edition of Newton's Principia and many other rare and valuable works.

These books form the largest and most valuable addition yet made to the University Library collections and in their original bindings are a most handsome enrichment of the University Library shelves.

Many of the books were part of Bishop's Tyrrell's library. It is hoped that a complete listing of the books will be published in the near future, including a list of those books known to have been in Righon Turrel's library.

The following manifesto was read in front of Parliament House on the Saturday by Jim McLennan of Canberra:

"We are standing here today, before Australia's Parliament House, as representatives of Christian youth across our Nation. We are here at this time because it's a significant time, what the Greeks of old would have called 'Kairos.'

"It is significant because we, he Australian people, have a new Government. It is significant ecause we, the Australian people, have a dream. A dream of peace in Asia and social se-curity at home. It is significant because we, the representatives known that we share the concern of this and every Government, for a better quality of life, both for the voting majority and for oppressed minorities.

"But we know from our own lives that no amount of legislation will liberate man from those basic desires that make legislation necessary, such as apathy, hate, lies, greed or lust for power. Legislating for the symptoms of the ills of our society is not sufficient. It should go hand in hand with treating the root cause of those ills.

"Therefore we declare to you
